STAT

Dear [Redacted]

STAT

This is in reference to our phone conversation of this morning in regard to [Redacted] lecturing to our group here in New York.

For your information, the National Foreign Trade Council is a private, non-profit organization of over 650 American companies engaged in diverse aspects of international trade and investment. I attach some background material on the Council.

STAT

[Redacted] gave a lecture to our group on two occasions in 1980, in New York and Chicago. His lecture was received very favorably by members of the Council and was considered very educational.

STAT

We intend to invite [Redacted] again to deliver a lecture to our members on a non-sensitive topic of general nature which can be educational to American businessmen. The topic has to be mutually selected, of course, but it would be something like "Business Risk Minimization in a Politically Unstable World."

We intend to have the proposed meeting in New York next January in a private club. It will be attended by American business executives (U.S. citizens), and it will be strictly off the record and only for members of the Council.

We will agree, as we did on the previous occasion, to pay the round trip travel expenses for [Redacted]

STAT

We trust that we will receive a favorable response to our request, and I look forward to hearing from you in this regard.

Sincerely,

Francis M. Goldmark
Vice President--
